About 400 bushels of wheat, some corn, oats, hay, harness etc. The wheat was insured but we could not learn of other insurance. How the fire started is a mystery as the conditions about the place were normal at twilight. His house was saved by hard work.

Last Saturday night the medicine show that had been holding forth south of the Kelley store closed after a ten days' sojourn in our town. They took away with them hundreds of dollars; it is the old, old, game a wonderful cure-all which if its virtues in accomplishing cures were true a man wouldn't find it necessary to stand up and harangue a crowd night after night for people would flock to the dispensers of the wonderful medicine unsolicited and the owners would be multi-millionaires in three weeks. Bunco! Bunco! when will the people learn in this neck of the woods that every time we have a good wheat crop a lot of fakers immediately flock here to fleece the unwary and they will come just as long as the people patronize every fake that puts in appearance.

A short time ago the Hays News contained a splendid essay written by Fred Halbleib of Riverside township son of Joe Halbleib who was recently killed in an auto accident. The essay was written at the Hays College early in the spring to be used for the dedication address at the fine new hospital which held its dedication services a few weeks ago. It was a masterly piece of work and showed an unusually brilliant mind in one so young. It seems remarkably sad that so promising and bright a young man should have had such a tragic and untimely end. The article was worthy of the high praise and comment which it received.
